dotBundle Cracked Version is a small-sized program whose main purpose is to aid you in compressing the libraries required by .NET applications you want to develop in one single executable. User-friendly interface
You are met by a pretty well-organized layout, as it consists of a menu bar, multiple buttons and a pane in which to view uploaded references. Some well-organized Help contents are included, and thus everybody can learn how to handle this app, regardless of their previous experience with the IT world. Multiple options you can take advantage of First and foremost, you should know it is possible to upload a main.NET executable with the help of a file browser, while you can also add multiple references, as long as they come in a DLL format. Aside from that, there are multiple aspects you can customize. For example, you can choose to copy assembly attributes, preserve native resources, compress and encrypt the resulted item. It is also possible to protect the contents of the EXE with a password, set it up to expire at a specified date or after a user-input number of uses. You can create a custom message for when the contents of a pack expire and you can select the output directory. Bottom line In conclusion, dotBundle is a handy piece of software when it comes to packing multiple.NET libraries in one single

---

EXE. The interface is suitable to all users, the compression process is fast and the computer's performance is not going to be affected at all.

Enables you to automate keystrokes in Windows 95/98/NT/2k/XP/Vista without the need to create a shortcut for each one. It is based on hotkeys and can take care of the following functions: Auto TypeText (Ctrl+T), Auto Jump (Ctrl+N), Auto Home (Ctrl+H), Auto Execute (Ctrl+A), Auto Close (Ctrl+F4), etc. It will create a macro with the hotkey you specify in the "Settings" window, so just set it up and you are good to go! In addition, you can share the macro with your friends and can even add a picture to it, so you can save it as a

---

"goodie". Anywhere Keyboard is a keyboard shortcut tool that lets you assign macros to all Windows hotkeys. All you need to do is to assign a macro to the desired hotkey. After that, whenever you press that hotkey, the macro will be executed. Note that you can assign macros to the following Windows hotkeys:

A small program that allows you to compress your.NET libraries in just one EXE! Usage: 1. Install dotBundle 2. Extract its contents to a folder of your choice (e.g. dotBundle\dotBundle). 3. Start dotBundle.exe 4. Select the.NET Framework version you want to install. 5. Select the assemblies you want to compress. You can add more than one. 6. Press the Compress button. 7. A prompt will appear, indicating the file you just compressed. 8. Wait until the process is finished, then go to the Directory where dotBundle was installed. 9. Start the executable of the .NET version you wanted. Important: - dotBundle needs to be run as administrator. - dotBundle is a stand-alone application and is not a part of Windows. - dotBundle can be run as many times as you want, but the number of libraries it can compress is limited to a maximum of five. - It is not possible to compress DLLs if they are open. - dotBundle can only compress.NET 4.0 assemblies.

---
