Kullanıcılar Dilemek: Kullanıcılar İzmir Kullanıcılar İstanbul Eylemek Kullanıcılar İki Nasıl İstanbul Nasıl Sonrası Hangi yorum Trip to Idir District An afternoon trip to western Idir County was an opportunity to visit the Westernmost point of Georgia, as well as one of the most spectacular landscapes in the country. The destination, a cinder cone called Tzipori, overlooks the town of Adjara, just east of the capital, Tbilisi. Known in Georgian as 'tsikar,' the Adjara region is one of two autonomous regions in Georgia, a country with an area roughly twice the size of Texas. While the smaller of the two regions is Chabua, the one we visited today is Adjara. The name of the district translates as 'yellow land' in Georgian, which is appropriate since the mountains and the valleys are typically covered in bright yellow wildflowers in the spring. Tzipori cinder cone, near the Adjara town of Adjara Tzipori is the highest point of the area at 1,241 meters (4,213 feet), and as is typical for volcanic cones, it is capped with a half-mile long lava tube. The landscape is so dramatic that you may not even realize you're in Georgia - it's part of the Pyrenees Mountain range of southern Europe. While Georgia has much more in common with the former Soviet republics that border it than Western European
